The Art of Reading Aloud
Captivating narration, exciting interpretation

Reading aloud is a unique form of storytelling. Using one's own voice to conjure up images, bring stories to life, and touch people's hearts is an art that goes far beyond the mere reading of text. Whether fairy tales, novels, poems, non-fiction, or original stories—words only achieve their full impact through expression, presence, and personal interpretation.

In this hands-on online workshop, participants discover how to bring texts to life in an authentic and impactful way. They learn to use their voices more consciously, expand their expressive range, and develop a delivery style that suits their personality. The process involves not only vocal technique and training but also body awareness, breathing, facial expressions, gestures, and the joy of creative expression.

Through simple yet effective exercises, participants gain confidence in reading and performing. They learn how to use their voices with resonance and presence without strain, and how relaxation helps reduce stage fright, shortness of breath, and other signs of tension. At the same time, working together on texts opens up new perspectives on familiar material and fosters the joy of interpretation.

The workshop is tailored to the participants' experiences, interests, and questions. Personal texts or selected reading materials serve as the basis for practical exercises, individual feedback, and valuable group exchange. The goal is to enable participants to immediately apply their newly acquired skills to their personal or professional lives. Workshop Highlights
